FREDERICK DIETZ DEAD.

Well-Known Box Manufacturer and South Side Resident.

Frederick Dietz a well-known citizen of the South Side, where he was engaged in business for a quarter of a century, died yesterday morning, aged sixty-seven years, at his home, 141 East South street. His illness, which was due to asthtroubles, was of about four duration and he has been in a precarious condition for a number of days He leaves a wife and four children, all sons and grown. They will succeed to the care of the dead man's business, which was that of a box manufacturer, at No. 400 Madison avenue. Mr. Dietz was born in Saxony, Germany, and he came to America in 1847. He was successful in business and leaves his family a comfortable estate. He was a Mason, a Red Man, a Druid and an Odd Fellow. The funeral will occur Sunday under charge of the Brightwood Water System.

The Town Board of Brightwood called in F. A. W. Davis, of the Indianapolis Water Company, night before last to learn from him what it would cost the suburban village to put in water works. He said the system would not answer for fire protection if the dependence were upon wells. When referred to the Knightstown system he said he had been called in as an expert in that case and had found that the fire protection would be inadequate with wells as the water supply. He urged the suburb to put in six-inch pipes so as to provide for a future day and add to the system as seemed needed. He told the board that his company would furnish fire protection for $2,000 a year, which would about amount to what the interest on the bonds proposed to be issued for the water works would be. He said there would no longer be any difficulty about pressure owing to the height of Brightwood above Indianapolis. The entire cost of the system, he said, if built as proposed, would be about $25,000. The board took his remarks under advisement.

LABOR AND

GEN. ROBBINS TALKS FURTHER ABOUT NEW ORDER OF THINGS.

Labor Unions Refused to Turn Out Last July.

The war department at the Statehouse is somewhat perturbed over the charge that members of labor unions are refused admission to the ranks of the State militia. Adjutant-general Robbins characterizes the statement as untrue, and yet admits that he keeps an eye upon all militiamen who wear, in addition to the governmental blue, the union badge. "I want it understood," said the Adjutant, "that whatever reports may come from this office through other State officials aside from the Governor, will not always be backed up here. This office is under my control, and I get my orders from the Governor and no one else. I have not said that members of labor organizations cannot join the militia. What I do say

"Any organization, order or fraternity that imposes obligations on its members would prevent them fulfilling their obligation to the State when mustered into service would, of course, incapacitate them from being members of the militia. The A. P. A. is such an organization, although there are some members of the order in the service of the State. I have just issued an order for the reorganization of a com-pany at New Albany which has in its ranks six members of labor unions."

The Adjutant-general read a letter from the captain of the Albany company, who wrote that the labor union men could be depended upon. The Adjutant-general says that since the riots of last summer he has been careful to investigate all new additions to the ranks of the militia. He says that when the troops were sent out in July several members of labor unions declined to go to the front.

The Legislative Council, a body of men representing various labor unions, has written to each legislative candidate asking if he will vote to increase the amount of appropriation for the State militia. The answers will be made known Sunday. The agitation of this question has caused the friends of the militia much anxiety. Most of the candidates have answered in the

THE REPUBLICAN HOME. A South-Side Institution in Its Hand-

some New Quarters. The Republican Home, a spacious twostory brick residence at No. 300 Virginia avenue, was last night dedicated by the South-side Republican Club. The event was in the nature of an informal opening of the clubrooms, and it is to be followed by a reception on next Thursday night. Five hundred people visited the home last night and admired its tasty arrangements. George W. Galvin, president of the club. delivered the address of welcome. In commenting upon the cozy surroundings he

"As politics is the true life of American manhood, and 'home' the complete and perfect synonym of happy contentment, it is well that the advance of intelligence and the growth of the desire to know should, even in politics, find expression in the establishment of a home whose halls shall resound with the cheer of friendly discussion and whose fireside shall warm to concerted effort in the cause of just and correct government. It is my pleasure to dedicate to-night to political thought and political purpose, as voiced by the Republican party, this beautiful home to the Republicans of Marion county."

The address of welcome was followed by selection of orchestral music, and then the guests were shown over the house. Other speeches were made during the evening by Gen. John Coburn, W. H. Leedy, Harry B. Smith, William Schmidt, Lawson M. Harvey and others. The Republican Home is the almost phenomenal publican Home is the almost phenomenal outgrowth of the efforts of the South-side Republican Club, which was organized but a short time ago, and which has a membership of one hundred. The officers of the new club are as follows: President, George W. Galvin; vice president, J. A. Dunlap; treasurer, John A. McFarland; secretary, W. L. Essman. All Republicans living south of the National road are eligible to active membership, and every Republican active membership, and every Republican n the city may become an honorary member by paying the initiation fee. The house is elegantly though modestly equipped throughout, and is to be made a permanent club for all South-side Republicans. There are two reception parlors, apartments for the secretary and treasurer and a private foom where the board of directors may hold their meetings undisturbed. A handsome upright piano occupies a position in one of the reception parlors and bright pictures and engravings adorn the walls. An immense banner bearing the stars and stripes floats from the front of the building, proclaiming the interior as the abode of all that is loyal and patriotic. The attractive manner in which the rooms are furnished is due to the artistic eye of the house committee, composed of Secretary Essman, George W. Bone, S. D. Noel and J. D. Dynes.

SULLIVAN WAS DISGUSTED.

Only Four People Came to Hear Him at Millersville.

The Democrats of Millersville are cautiously chuckling over the discomfiture of ex-Mayor Sullivan, who one night last week went out to the suburban village to deliver a Democratic speech. Although the ex-Mayor's ride to the village was not in the nature of a triumphal march, his coming had been heralded by flaming posters and much bluster, and he was confident that he would at least enjoy the attention of a corporal's guard. On his arrival at Millersville, the orator at once hastened to the designated place of meeting. The spot was deserted and he waited. After a half hour had passed a Republican put in an appearance, and later on three Democrats came. The ex-Mayor indulged in a disgusted in-ventory of the crowd and silently made his way to the city.

COX WOULD NOT WITHDRAW.

Democrats Wanted to Indorse a Populist Candidate. Owing to the failure of the Populists to nominate two candidates for judicial offices the Democrats believe they can accomplish a partial success in the county by an alliance of some sort with the Populists. Leon Bailey tried to induce Millard F. Cox to withdraw as candidate for Superior Court room No. 1, in order that the party might indorse S. M. Shepard for the office for which he is the Populist candidate and the Populists in return indorse date, and the Populists in return indorse the Democratic candidates. But Judge Cox refused to withdraw. Nevertheless, the effort is in progress to have the Populists indorse Harper and Bartholomew. Tom Taggart's Last Plea. Secretary Seeds, of the Republican State central committee, yesterday came into possession of a pleading circular of type writing fac-simile, bearing the signature of T. Taggart. It bears date Oct. 23 and under the word "dictated," begins by asking the recipient if he may not ask himas green goods circulars are so frequently marked-as a Democrat from principle, one who has rendered the party invaluable service in the past, "to again go out among your neighbors and friends and use your influence to secure a Democratic victory?" Then is recited a list of the glorlous things the party has done, winding up with the startling declaration that the country has been "restored to a sound financial condition." He claims that a tariff law has been passed that dealt a "death blow" to trusts, (excepting, of course, if the assertion be true, the Sugar Trust), and the country, which was on the verge of ruin by reason of thirty years of Republican rule, saved. In State matters he charges that the Republicans threaten to overturn the various laws, which are not in issue at all. Then the letter becomes plaintive and says: "Is it not time to for-get personal disappointments, sink private resentments and work that the advance ground may be lost?" The letter is a part of a new scheme of aligning the ranks that have become uneven and broken all over the country. A special committee of twenty in each county has been appointed for the purpose of working with alienated Democrats, except soldiers. These they consider past reclaiming

The committees were appointed Oct. 14 and on Oct. 15 thy received their first installment of money. They have been using this resource ever since and there was for a time, a growing interest among the ward workers, which has now died down again. The committees are promised another payment of money on Monday or Tuesday of next week. Then another spurt of activity may be expected among those who always answer only to the sight of Mr. Adams at Castleton.

J. C. Adams, Republican candidate for the Legislature, spoke to three hundred people at Castleton last night. The yards of the Excelsior Brick Company proved a convenient place for holding the meeting, the crowd occupying the dry sheds. Mr. Adams opened his speech with a reference to the brick-making industry, a subject with which many of his auditors were familiar. He pointed out the defects in the new tariff bill as it relates to the craft of the American laborer, and was often interrupted by enthusiastic cheers. He was fol-lowed by Vinson Carter, candidate for a Superior judgeship.

Mr. Henry's East-End Meeting.

The Charles L. Henry meeting in the East End to-night will be held in the Ohiostreet baseball park, where the crowd can be accommodated with seats and a protection against the chill of the weather. From the experience of the campaign and the energy of the East-end Republicans there is no other kind of chill thought of. The occasion will be the chief rally of the East End. The Soldiers' and Soldiers' Sons' Club will assemble at the Journal corner, at 7 o'clock sharp, and will then march to the ball grounds.

Koontz's Veterans Disbanded. All efforts of George Koontz to revive the Democratic soldiers' organization have failed and the veterans declare they have had enough of palaver without works from the Democratic party. The call for a meeting at the Criminal Court room brought only those interested in the organization for personal reasons and a few veterans who came to stick a knife into their unfaithful leaders. This so discouraged the leaders that there has been no effort since to organize them.

Republican Veterans.

Adjutant Snyder, of the Republican Veteran's Battalion, requests the members to meet in front of the Marion county Republican headquarters this evening at 7 o'clock to attend Charles L. Henry's meeting at the ball park.

A BARTENDER'S STORY

COLBERT TRIED TO HAVE HIM SELL GOOD-E'S COMMITTEE LIQUOR.

Democratic Committee Evidently Wanted to Trap Fred Brant, a Republican, but Failed.

Every few days some new light is thrown upon the methods employed by the Democratic "Good-e citizens" committee to secure campaign thunder for the Democratic county central committee. The developments show that the committee was not making an honest effort to find saloon keepers who were making a practice of violating the liquor laws, but was out for the purpose of getting "thunder" for the political committee which instigated the tour. The committee evidently proceeded on the theory that the end justified the means.

It has been shown that in one saloon ex-Sergeant Hagerdorn pleaded his friendship to induce the saloon keeper to violate the law, after he had said positively that he had been observing it. It now appears from a bartender's statement that Thomas Colbert, ex-superintendent of police, tried the effect of his persuasive powers to induce the bartender to violate the law, after the bartender had refused the request of the committee for drinks. The Journal, a few days ago, published a history of this tour of the "Good-e citizens," as it was reported to have come direct from the inner circle of the Democratic committee rooms. It was stated that Colbert was responsible for Hagerdorn being chosen as the guide for the committee. Captain Colbert denied, in the most emphatic terms, that he was in any way connected with the trip. The wrath of the saloon keepers had begun to gather in dark and threatening clouds that hung over the Democratic horizon. Ever since the tour came into notoriety the Democratic committee has been making su-perhuman efforts to avoid the results of its political folly in instigating the trip. The saloon proprietors, however, are highly incensed, and are not so careful as to what they say about the tour as the political committee and originators of the scheme.

Most of the saloon men are perfectly will-ing to tell all they know about the facts One of the saloons visited by the committee on the Sunday when the tour was made was that of Fred Brandt, at 44 West Washington street. Ex-Superintendent Colbert, it is stated, was in the saloon, which is also a restaurant, at about 11 o'clock, on the morning when the committee, guided by ex-Sergeant Hagerdorn, came in. There were only two persons besides Hagerdorn in the crowd at this place. What transpired in the saloon has been told by George Wyatt, the bartender. He was asked yesterday afternoon to tell what took place when the committee sought to purchase drinks. He talked freely and without reserve. Wyatt said: "The three of them, I know Hagerdorn, but do not know who the other two were, came in abut 11 o'clock and asked for drinks. I told them I could not sell them anything on Sunday. Colbert was standing near the crowd when I refused the request. He had come into the saloon a few minutes before the others. When I refused to sell the drinks Coibert spoke up and said 'Why don't you let them have something? They are all right.' I said that might be true but I could not sell anything on Sunday. Colbert again tried to induce me to sell to them and said 'Don't you know Hagerdorn? He left the force when I did.' I answered that I knew Hagerdorn but could not sell the crowd anything to drink. Hagerdorn and the two men with him then left the saloon and Colbert went out right after

To further show the Democratic scheme in the Good-e Citizen investigation it may be stated that Fred Brandt has been regarded as a Republican and it was probably the intention of the Democratic committee to have the Good-e committee buy drinks at Brandt's so that it could be stated that the police were allowing a Republican saloon keeper to keep open on Sunday. Instead, the committee found that the bartender would not sell the liquor on Sunday, although he was assured by Colbert, as Wyatt states, that the men were all right. One of Colbert's friends says he was an innocent party and did not know that the men who wanted drinks composed a smelling committee.

Liquor Cases in Police Court. *

The trial of Oliver Cousins for violating the liquor law was heard yesterday by Judge Stubbs, who took the case under advisement, for personal inspection of the property, before giving his decision. The officer said he saw the liquor given, or sold, through the window, but Cousins said it was impossible to see through the window. The case of Conrad Monninger was also taken under advisement, it being stated to the court by Daniel Monninger, the defendant's brother that Conrad is of failing mind. It was promised that the place would be closed up. The affidavits in all the liquor cases resulting from the trip of the Good-e citizenship committee were refiled yesterday in their proper form. They will be called for trial in a few days.

Supplying Counties with Ballots. At the hour of closing last night sixty county clerks had applied for election ballots at the bureau of printing in the Statehouse. Clerks will be supplied with tickets until 5 o'clock to-night. After that hour the ballots will be sent out by messenger and the counties compelled to stand the expense of the same. Thirty-two counties are yet to be supplied with ballots.

For Robbing Freight Cars. Charles Jackson, John Ray and Oscar Thompson, accused of stealing thirteen hides, several sets of harness, three coops of chickens and two revolvers from Big Four freight cars Wednesday night, were arrested yesterday by patrolmen Giblin and Johnson and Sergeant Mefford. Ray has served time in the penitentiary for similar Tax Commission Proceedings. A pamph'et containing the proceedings of the Indiana State Board of Tax Commissioners for 1894 shows that the improvements on the right of way of railroads in Marion county are valued at $917,872. The Indianapolis & Vincennes railway is shown to pay but $235 on improvements. The Union Station is assessed at $500,000.

AND DRIED

TURNER ADMITS HE WAS SENT TO YELLOW BRIDGE TO INCITE RIOT.

Democratic Committee Intended to Repeat the Performance of 1891-Turner Will Speak No More.

J. Milton Turner was seen about the streets yesterday renewing acquaintances among some colored people, and between times seeing several saloon keepers. One of the men he met was W. W. Christy, a well-known colored citizen. Turner broached the subject of the Yellow bridge trouble of the night previous, and asked Christy what he thought of it.

"Well," said Christy, "I think it is very wrong, and that you ought not to have had any trouble. I was sorry that the meeting did not hear you through."

"Oh, those niggers heard me through," said he, with alacrity; "that was all right. The meeting went off according to prearrangement. It was all done according to programme. We wanted you fellows to kick up a rumpus and you did it, just as we expected. But the Republicans will lose the county by it. I knew I was not in danger. A rock hit a nigger next to me and it might have hit me just as quick, but I was not to be hit. I knew what I was

Later in the day Turner, J. T. V. Hill and Manning were together, and Hill remarked, very bravely for a man with his sprinting record, that there was going to be another meeting last night.

"Well," said Turner, "if there is you might as well be getting another speaker if you are expecting me to be there. I know when I have had enough."

he says, if anybody wants to deny these statements as to what was said, or to fix responsibility for them. The Democratic leaders supposed that after the trick in the municipal campaign of 1891 was so bene-ficial in its effect, as they supposed, this could not fail to be a coup of no mean conception. But it fell short of expectation. The crowd was orderly until the speaker saw that the merely argumentative style would not suffice, and tien began to abuse the colored voters present, calling them offensive names with profane lan-guage mixed in. He made some allusions of disrespectful nature to ex-President Harrison, but the meeting was then in a turmoil and the exact words were not caught. He has since denied that he said anything of this nature relating to General Harrison, and yesterday wrote the General a note disclaiming his language. The most charitable view that can be taken of his performance is that it was done under influences other than those of his intelligence. On the way from the crowd he was very abusive of Sergeant Lowe and the police, though they were the only ones hit by the flying stones after the meeting dispersed. They surrounded him with drawn revolvers and each received blows from the missiles. Sergeant Lowe received three, one being a sharp and painful blow on the left shin. Patrolman Crane was hit in the neck. Turner kept up his abuse until A. E. Manning quieted him with the remark that the police had done well and that Turner wanted to register at the Grand Hotel, but was quietly given the tip by Manning, at the instance of Taggart, through John R. Wilson, that he had better not risk a refusal. He was reminded that Taggart was now in business—a business which made the color line more or less inevitable—and that he could not be entertained there. Macning then secured quarters for him at the Occidental. Turner was asked about the report yesterday afternoon, but he deprecated the ques-tion and only smiled as he said he preferred not to talk on the subject. The question was put to Manning, who denied the story, and said that Turner was taken direct to the Occidental. Manning, since his aspirations to become minister to Liberia, has been practicing in diplomacy.

NOT THE H. B. SMITH CLUB.

This Organization Had No Part in Disturbing Turner's Meeting. President Jackson and a delegation of the Harry B. Smith Republican Club, represent that great injustice has been done them by the News in copying the report of the Sentinel to the effect that it participated in the disturbance of the harangue of Turner at the Yellow Bridge, Wednesday evening. Mr. Jackson and his associates say they passed by Turner's meeting on their way to a meeting in Antioch Church, but had no drums, went to that place and participated in a large meeting and heard nothing of the disturbance until it was over. The president of the Herculean Club was at another meet-ing all the evening and that club was not out. "The young colored men who belong to the Harry B. Smith Club," said its presi-dent, "have no sympathy with those who disturb any meeting, no matter what the provocation. We value the reputation of being orderly citizens as much as any men can, but it does seem to me that the abusive and exasperating talk of Turner was intended by those who put him forward to bring about the disturbance it did. The Harry B. Smith Club, however, was nearly a mile away when the trouble occurred."

The Friend of American Corn. Secretary Smith, of the Indianapolis Board of Trade, is in receipt of a letter from Col. Charles J. Murphy, special representative of the United States Agricultural Department in Europe. Colonel Murphy writes from Brussels that he expects to arrive in New York next Monday on a sixty days' leave of absence. It is his desire, while in America, to address the In-dianapolis people on the introduction of Indian corn into the European markets, and proposes to show how export trade can be increased. Secretary Smith has written Colonel Murphy as to a date convenient for his visit to this city, and will arrange with him to address the members of the Board of Trade upon his favorite subject. Col. Murphy has been in Europe for a number of years laboring in the interests of the American farmer, and has done much toward increasing exports of corn to the foreign markets. He at first went abroad at his own expense and visited the different countries, exhibiting corn and lecturing upon the various processes of converting the product into food. His efforts in behalf of America have been recognized by the government.

A Revolver in the Herrickson Case. A revolver was found yesterday near where the body of Charles Herrickson was discovered floating in the canal Thursday a week ago. Herrickson's left ear and left side of the neck were powder burned, and it is supposed this was caused by a discharge of the revolver. The owner of the revolver is supposed to be a short, reavy-set man who was seen in the neighborhood the Wednesday before. No importance is attached to the finding of the weapon, as there were no bullet marks on Herrickson's body.

One Was Smoking Opium. Ida and Pauline Edwards, daughters of the woman who died mysteriously on Wood street, last spring, were arrested in Cincinnati, Wednesday night, for being in bad company. One was found in an opium den,
